

Safe buildings research develops better methods, technologies and guidance for building decontamination, focusing on biological and chemical agents that might be used in a terrorist attack on buildings.

Rapid risk assessment research provides information, tools, and support for emergency response personnel to aid in the preparation and response to terrorist events.

Water security research provides technical support to strengthen water systems against terrorist attacks through early detection, implementation of corrective actions, and decontamination to restore clean and safe water supplies.

U.S. EPA's National Homeland Security Research Center
Andy Avel, Deputy Director for Management
Cincinnati, OH • avel.andy@epa.gov